"We claim that instead of the Grand Fountain being indebted to the bank. It is indebted to the Grand Fountain. In October, 1910, the Grand Fountain, acting under the advice of counsel, filed a bill in the Chancery Court of Richmond, setting up that the bank was insolvent and owed the Grand Fountain upwards of $155,000. The bank answered and admitted an indebtedness to the Grand Fountain. Wherefore the court, upon the claim of the Grand Fountain and the admission of the bank appointed receivers for of the bank, appointed receivers for the bank. This was done on October

"When, some months afterwards, the receivers of the bank indicated that they would claim an indebtedness from the Grand Fountain to the bank, which was the first indimation we had that the receivers would make any such claim, thus reversing the situation upon which the receivership was granted, the Grand Fountain employing Hon R. E. Byrd and the firm of Montague & Montague to look after its interest.

ile to suspend judgment until the Grand Fountain's side of the matter can be presented to the Chancery Court. As stated in The Times-Dispatch yesterday, should the contention of the receivers of the bank that the Grand Fountain and its officers be held responsible for the sums due the bank from the auxiliary enterprises, is sustained, the True Reformers as such tained, the True Reformers as such business.

However, it will be contended by the order that the receivers cannot hold it for these amounts, and a fight will be waged before the court against the claims of the receivers. The outline of the argument of the Grand Fountain, prepared yesterday, is as follows:

"The report of the receivers for the True Reformer's Bank is, of course, a one-sided statement, and made by the representatives of the defunct bank. It is not judicial in any sense, and the real relation of the Grand Fountain, prepared yesterday, is as follows:
